Letter Of The Issue!

Dear Lasagne!

I've been an Oasis fan for two years now. I know, it's not really a long time, but I've felt so many different feelings during those two years, and only because of this band.

I've felt such incredible joy and happiness while listening to their songs.

I've felt sadness and fear while reading news about 'Oasis splitting up!'

I've felt 'long distance love' for Liam, and some kind of jealousy when I've seen a picture of him and Patsy or some other girl.

I've felt worry when I've noticed in what kind of condition Liam is nowadays and how much he drinks.

I've felt admiration and respect for Noel. I think he is a genius.

I've felt irritation while reading their comments in newspapers from when they've been drunk.

I've felt disgust towards the press because of all the untrue stories written about Oasis.

I've felt uncertainty because I haven't known how the things really are.

I've felt...a lot.

I'm no longer jealous of Patsy Kensit. I don't really think I love Liam anyway. (I don't know him personally so how could I?!). I think I would even survive the band's split up..(Of course I don't want it to happen!)..because after that I will still have their music, and that's all I've ever had, except for stories about them and posters on my wall...

THE FUTURE?

So Oasis were meant to have split up, albeit for only one day. As most of us know, Noel and Liam have had these differences in the past, and I daresay will have more in the future. Does this not prove that they are just very close and respect each other? Most of what's gone on has happened at some stage before; only this time with the coverage on Oasis and Liam in particular so highly documented by the media, people are more aware of the situation and quick to jump on the band-wagon. Oasis have so much going for them; great tunes, great lyrics, I believe they do care for their people. There are pros and cons for the price of fame in this country. Yes, a lot of you may well like to be in the band's shoes, but spare a thought for them, and Liam in particular about the constant hounding they receive. Liam can't do anything without him having his photo taken and splashed all over the tabloids. Basically he has no real private life anymore, and that for anyone to deal with in such a small space of time is a lot. They all need their own time and space to come to terms with being the biggest band in the country, and at this moment in time, debateably the world. We all need to take time out at various stages in our lives. I must admit I did not know what to think when I heard the rumours flying around. Like I said, everything they do is so highly documented nowadays. Just enjoy their music and patiently wait for the new album. Carry on lads, you're the greatest.
